Medium Synopsis: (98 words)

Women today work outside the home, care for children or parents, volunteer in the community, study or run businesses. With all these jobs competing for their limited time, it can be a struggle to keep their homes in order too. Often, they'll clean according to other people's opinions rather than to fulfil their family's needs.

Minimally Viable Housekeeping compares historic house and modern hotel operations, examines business effectiveness and efficiency techniques, and applies them to managing a home. Delegating, prioritising, planning, scheduling, zoning, standardising and continuously improving can get it all done with the least time and effort.

5 Fun Facts from Minimally Viable Housekeeping

1. Housekeeping is more than just cleaning; it's managing the household, not necessarily doing everything. Outside of the home, it's a full-time role coordinating the activities of employees.
2. Housekeeping is not an objective fact, it's a subjective interpretation of what you need to make your home a comfortable and supportive place to live.
3. You don't have to do it all: husbands, children, pets and services can all help with the load.
4. Failing to plan at home affects the time, cost and quality of results in the same way as work.
5. Knowing what your right stuff is and why helps you focus on what needs to be done.
